WHAT IF.....? A GOOD QUESTION OPENS NEW POSSIBILITIES

“What is a good question?” you may ask.

In my way of thinking a good question opens the questioner and the one to whom the question is addressed to widen the mind to venture outside the consensus reality of family or culture. A good question might also put the hearer in touch with the deepest recesses of their essence.

Divine Mind seeks novelty and we are the ones on planet Earth who are, par excellence, here to make known the unknown as fractals of this Mind.

It's not given to everyone to be a risk-taking explorer of outer space or a scientist venturing into new areas of knowledge, nor an inventor bringing free energy into new technologies for power in our homes.

The framing of a good question is the province of science yet each of us is a scientist, subconsciously making every-day hypotheses about how the world works and testing them out - What if I bought this as a gift – would she love it like I do? I'll try, and it can always be exchanged.

The ability to test perceptions begins at a very early age, witnessed in little children testing out their parents or teachers to see how their behaviour can get what they want through tantrums, attention-seeking behaviour, tears. In Transactional Analysis this child role is termed the “Little Professor”.

So Earth is a living laboratory and a classroom, as are our bodies, for learning to work with the science of energy and consciousness. I propose that the spirituality of the imminent Aquarian Age will be the science of energy and consciousness in which the chakra system, psychic gifts and quantum information (such as the understanding of quantum entanglement) will open humanity to vast new fields of knowledge, expression and invention. This will be the Age of the Science of Right Human Relationships viewed from an astrological perspective. ⁽¹⁾

“Teachable moments” in the classroom are opportunities for pertinent “good questions” to be asked of students who are curious, out-of-their-depth, and open to a new way of seeing. This is because they are tackling an issue hitherto outside of their experience yet significant for them to be able to grasp a new reality, incorporate it and manage it in their lives.

Likewise, such issues are the stuff that a really good investigative journalist might tackle, asking a good question to awaken public consciousness to information and ideas that empower and extend their understanding of the world and to question the status quo for its relevance and benefit to the world.

My perception of mainstream secondary education is that it focuses on the enculturation of students to take their place in the existing workforce and to be good citizens.

What then is the role of university studies? How many tertiary teachers are interested and skilled in asking their students “What if” questions, questions “outside the box”, questions that encourage lateral thinking and inventiveness for new social and technological systems that might better address the needs and ills of humanity?

Problems in society can arise when technological expertise outstrips the human moral and ethical capacity to deal with the ramifications of such technology upon human wellbeing. “What if” questions are lacking that take a systems approach to the impact of new inventions.

This is possible if experimenters and inventors have a worldview that is cut adrift from a sense of being part of the universe and its laws of creation and of nature, with their accompanying sense of the inextricably interwoven nature of a multi-dimensional reality. Such a worldview could give rise to a materialistic and separative view of humanity, seen as a commodity, merely consumers of technology for financial profit and power gained through monopoly over choice and, eventually, over human sovereignty.

Kyriacos Markides, a Greek-Cypriot academic sociologist with an interest in the spirituality of the Orthodox monks of Mt Athos, in his book Silence on the Mountain writes of three major areas for human knowing and experience: through the five senses (science); through logic and abstract reason (mathematics and philosophy); and through contemplation. Markides asserts that these three, together, constitute the integrated fullness of being human.

Markides deems human culture to be out of balance where one of these is missing. I am reminded of the powerful movie Koyaanisqatsi on this theme, deeply embedded in my memory through countless re-runs and viewings of it, (in laid-back position), on the ceiling of my avant-garde dentist’s ceiling during my dental treatment!

Openness to the new is enhanced when the old world view is no longer relevant or seen to be coherent or sufficient for new circumstances. There are vested interests in holding onto an old paradigm and favouring what has brought success or security in the past.⁽²⁾ Values, beliefs, customs and habits are rarely questioned unless there is a crisis or trauma that seriously challenges and brings to consciousness the tenets that underpin them. Even so, in scientific change it may take years before the new possibilities and ways of doing and thinking are researched and become part of a new scientific reality.

Some good questions are ahead of their time and only become consensus reality after a long gestation period. A WWOOFer⁽³⁾ from a non-English-speaking country stayed with us. He had very little conversational English and relied on his cell phone’s capacity to translate into English. He wanted to study for a PhD in Anthropology. In class he asked me a good question in that it threw me back on my own foundational beliefs and world view and how I had formed them. What I read on his cell phone seemed the sort of question a lecturer in anthropology might set as an essay topic for students. Basically the question implied that all beliefs are solely reflections of the culture from which they arise. This WWOOFer wanted to know my opinion.

What I came up with for my on-the-spot answer was that in all religions there is a belief that there is a Universal Intelligence conveying order, inter-relationship and coherence within creation. As well, there is a yearning in a great many human beings to identify with, and to understand or make contact with, this Intelligence so as to make meaning of their own existence and to order it accordingly. This could be understood as an archetypal underpinning in humanity - built-in and universal.

It is my understanding, from my spiritual studies, that we humans are light beings clothed in flesh⁽⁴⁾, bringing spirit (father) into matter (mother) via their offspring, the son/sun/sol/soul of dual consciousness and identity. The earthling who returns to dust also rises in soul-consciousness to embrace a reality beyond the three-dimensional world after death. Near Death Experiences attest to this. The religious and spiritual pathways, including drug use done with spiritual intent, testify to this human yearning and propensity during life in time, space and matter.

I treasure my esoteric studies on the Laws of the Universe and of the Soul. In these humanity is portrayed as mediator between the heavens and the earth, through studies in esoteric astrology and the chakra system. This discipline reflects the maxim As Above, so Below (aka the Law of Correspondence). These studies have helped me find my unique role and the “law of my being” in this lifetime, as well as find those with whom I have incarnated for a particular purpose,⁽⁵⁾ and to feel part of an interacting evolving universe.

CG Jung writes:

“The only meaningful life is a life that strives for the individual realization - absolute and unconditional - of its own particular law...To the extent that a man is untrue to the law of his own being...he has failed to realize his life’s meaning” ⁽⁶⁾

Good questions may lead to a contemplation of “the noble middle path” ⁽⁷⁾ advocated by the Buddha. Here the observer perceives the whole spectrum of any particular situation with inclusive impartiality, viewing both its positive and negative connotations simultaneously. On the spiritual path the aim is to choose that which lies at neither end of the spectrum but to embrace the “central way of light”.⁽⁸⁾ An advanced experience of this, (perhaps best described as the intuitive faculty of “buddhi”) ⁽⁹⁾ is the capacity to use “inclusive reason” which is “that pure intuitional infallible comprehension which grasps cause and effect simultaneously, and sees why and whence and to what end all things are moving”. ⁽¹⁰⁾

Old questions and methods might fruitfully recycle into usefulness, especially in this time of “woke” thinking! I long for a good public debate or forum in the mass media, a discussion using the process of thesis-antithesis-synthesis, a triologue.

Perhaps there will only ever be a small percentage of the population asking good questions, engaged in the quest for meaning and tracking the evolution of human consciousness and its contemporary ‘leading edge’. May these people continue to ask good questions which open up new possibilities for civilisation on our planet.

THE DAY THE SNAKE LEFT ITS HOLE - 1ST/2ND FEB 2025

The most precious moments are when the experience of UNION is a deep sharing of the essentiality of Being.

This can Be; when speech... spoken is heard by intent listening ...and the “spoken” and “heard” are ONE. This can Be; when the searching heart reads and written words reveal themselves as expansive Comprehension.

The reader somehow communes with the Soul of the Author.

This can be when open awareness accepts; while in a state of stillness; the “energy in the space between and within sounding. The quality of the “feeling/thought form” is received. This is more than just hearing the spoken or written word!

Helen Greaves sequel to Testimony of Light is The Challenging Light. In this sequel, which I synchronistical read on 14 March it is stated: -“I have come to the conclusion since being in this Plane of living that there (on earth) one covered one’s real thoughts with the spoken word.”

Here, thought speaks to thought. In other words, it is impossible to hide anything. Meaning is communicated directly between souls.

This is a very difficult premise...” Page 20. (Frances Banks is the speaker conveying her message by spiritual telepathy to Helen).

The above “red statements”; somehow convey this “difficult premise”. Thus when reading Helen’s book I felt an inner thrill... a moment of JOY. A deeper comprehension prevailed.

This can Be; felt when food is sought in company...Sharing nature’s gifts from the skilled chef’s kitchen...each “taste” creates a new experience of sensing... taste/texture/smell...the visual sights...colours...COMBINE to create a Flowing Delight.

Again the qualitative exchange of the substance is received because of the energetics used in its creation. Over time the intensity of the abstract alone; may be lost or reduced...the experiential context holds the lasting power of remembrance. Below this “context” is expressed as inner dialogue.

What follows is only one description of a “FELT” reality!

The new friend, sitting next to me spontaneously divulging her inner thoughts...the reciprocity of reception and the recognition of another touching on topics recently deeply expressing within me; was creating a joyful energy flow of significance. This intense and intimate conversation continued in an expanding shared space. A definite, unique and tangible event was happening...unknown but revealing as it progressed. This moment echoed a mystical synchronicity, reminding one of the “NOW” explicating. The quality of resonance merging and the deeply felt recognition had an impersonality and totality that smelt of completion. Union holds that “completion”; maybe “fullness” conveys the unspoken; but deeply felt experience! The “fullness” of sun-drenched RIPE fruit!

In this state of communion; the sharing of a “feast” with the group became a unique heightened state of absorption. Time had a different rate of extending as that “NOW” explored many fields.

While walking; on the second day after this event... as these thoughts formulated the sense of a spiritual telepathic communication taking place simultaneously deepened.

I received the message...“The snake has truly left his hole!” Once more... deep Gratitude!

Malvin Artley’s recent article alluded to this emergence of the snake from the earth’s depth! Knowing this state, in itself is more than enough. The sense of a "universal presence" is there... Touching!

This heightened state was brought on by my new female friend conveying sincerely an impersonal unconditional inclusive love ... which was reciprocal ... this triggering of an exquisite mutuality in relationship was witnessed by each other’s partners and it progressively became all embracing. I recall Marcel Vogel’s advice to first establish a relationship with the plant before attempting communication. Many scientists could not repeat Cleve Backster’s plant experiments; Marcel not only repeated his work but demonstrated it while separated from the plant by 1000 miles.

By “establishing a relationship” Marcel was asking that love be expressed towards the plant ... this was a primary “condition” required for success which few scientists could emulate. The resultant “squiggle” on the recorder changed Marcel’s life!

The same principle of establishing a relationship (LOVE) was used by Marcel towards both his Quartz Crystal (a special design) and the Recipient when HEALING.

In fact the gem-cutter had to hold the energy of love while making the crystal and this crystal would break at the tip if used harmfully. Further harmful usage would result in the crystal shattering. Love being the essence of the crystal’s purpose.

The power of Intention (Ray1 Will/Power) was deliberately embedded in the memory of the crystal while in meditation ... Cause No Harm.

Consider that the Ray1 sounding was effectively used in conjunction with Ray2 sounding by Marcel when healing.

This “impersonal, unconditional, inclusive love” is the essential 2nd Ray of Love and Wisdom quality actually SOUNDING. YES! I mean exactly that...yet this sound energy has a fullness that is immeasurable. “It is the sound, producing an effect in matter, which a particular ray may make.

This is in some ways a difficult way of expressing it, but if it is realised that... each of the seven rays emits its own sound and in so doing sets in motion those forces which must work in unison with it, the entire question of man's free will, of his eternal destiny and of his power to be self-assertive comes up for solution.” Esoteric Psychology 1... Alice A Bailey page 9.

“Dissonance yet sounds forth, and discord arises from many systems, but in the progression of the aeons an ordered harmony will eventuate, and the day will dawn when (if we dare speak of eternities in the terms of time) the sound of the perfected universe will resound to the uttermost bounds of the furthest constellation.” Initiation Human and Solar ... Alice A Bailey page 5.

The above esoteric quotes’ significance is evidently impacting me strongly as I review my experience.

This experience still holds me in its embrace as time flows by ... the lingering qualities of LIFE touched in fullness; remain.

There is a major progressive leap of human consciousness taking place on earth; right NOW!
The key to enter is sounding LOVE.

All forms of life are participating as we approach the Solar Fire Festival on 12 May this year ... 2025.

Brothers and Sisters the moment of choice is yours...choose LOVE!
Enter your Heart...
Love and Light - Orest

Postscript...These further thoughts, though personal give balance and provide some explanation...
There have been earlier gradual developments that evidenced an improvement in my ability to communicate.
In retrospect some hurdle moments of high leaps may be recalled. These confirmed that effort will be rewarded. Real Communication was my challenge in this life.

Listening without analysis, judgement or criticism is a difficult skill to cultivate.

Within this recollection process are moments of reflection where choices were made under circumstances of my selfish preoccupation and limited sharing. This is the reality! I experienced much pain; yet also caused pain to others!

CHIRON in Libra in the first house... from my Natal Chart
“CHIRON IN THE 1ST HOUSE...You are wounded, either emotionally or physically. Every time you express your essential being you experience rejection. This may lead to self-exploration and you may later become a wounded healer or teacher.

CHIRON IN LIBRA...The imbalance of relationships, both personal and impersonal, causes you pain. You will also feel vulnerable to injustice. You may have suffered in an early relationship with a parent figure of the opposite sex. You will learn much through relationships, and may become a counsellor.” Solar Fire Gold
The underlined parts and the RED-printing; do reflect my early experiences. Indeed; this summation is essentially accurate.

Though other astrological aspects; such as mercury in Aries in the 7th House aided in my growth, there are many challenges inherent in this Chiron aspect. Challenges requiring resolution!

An inner compulsion persisted; driving me towards a fuller expression and exploration of my underlying need to know myself and the other. Choices were made as opportunities presented.

Study, Meditation and Service eventually became regular practices...as revelation, intuition and consciousness developed ... resolution of challenges unfolded.

This journey of discovery continues.

POEMS

CENTRING

Allow; Accept; Be Open
Life's FLOW longs for Thy receiving...

The doubting mind
Creating further barriers, obstacles and cleavages
Will hinder; attainment of progression.

Observe the Inner
As subtle energies impress...
If you continue to focus outwards;
Appearances will continue to deceive.

The CALL is sounding
Hints abound as inner needs arise...

Listen in moments
Between breaths
Listen in moments
As Stillness reigns
Listen as the Heart quietens
When rest beckons

A VOICE Whispers!

PISCES... WATERS OF CLARIFICATION....

February the 19th 2004 OREST
Threads encoded bind in time
Currents flow, patterns weaving
Spindles whirl unceasingly.

Garments of life anew receiving,
Debris of past, unwound deceiving
Dissolving knots untie then Releasing.

Etheric webs rent, stretched and torn
Higher mists of twine inform,
Warming light, to dark depth penetrates
As new currents uprising demonstrate,
Refashioning the garments of time.
Fishes of one thread, one garment forming
One garment dissolving as threads unwind.

Unseen hands, unseen needles,
Knit the garment of thy dreaming.
Dreamer awoken to consciousness threads
Form garments of thy choosing;
Colour, shapes entwine and bind
Sounding the patterns of the Mind

Garments thrice the earth enfolding
Finer threads entrain this moulding,
Forms appear in cycles seven...
Spiralling to heights ascending
Blending the patterns of the awakened soul
Resonating your matrix to the Whole.

SOUTHERN LIGHTS CENTRE DIARY NOTES

Greetings to all readers.

Looking back, during this quarter we experienced an extraordinary amount of social interaction. We hosted WWOOFers (Willing Workers on Organic Farms) from France, the UK, Argentina, Japan and the USA. They were engaged in planting, weeding and watering our extended garden beds which now include onions and carrots. They mowed lawns and helped with tree felling, wood carting, chain-sawing and chopping in readiness for a long winter of wood fires. We offered them classes on Sound, the Electric Universe, reading of their natal astrology charts and the 'spiritual anatomy' of the soul, its functions and purposes. It is always enjoyable to have these WWOOFers occasionally cook for us. A stack of French crepes made a delectable dessert one evening.

The young boy with us for a weekend last year, returned one weekend and took his place among the men in the forest in the wood-getting process. One day he went out on the land with the man and his possum-tracking dog for a few hours, here as part of a campaign on Banks Peninsula to eliminate the huge number of possums which devastate the native bird population as well as fruit trees and some flowers. This young boy became engrossed in my book, the Encyclopedia Galactica, asking many searching questions about our earthly connection with other star races. Groups stayed with us for spiritual activities, one for a joint ritual honouring the Divine Feminine.

We shared meditation and conversation with another Japanese group staying with us, two women with physical disabilities seeking to spread the message of peace and their two carers.

There were joyful reunions with two of our past WWOOFers (French and Belgian) who returned with their travelling parents whom they wanted us to meet and catch up on all their activities and ours. We were also thrilled to spend a wonderful afternoon with our dear friend and spiritual colleague who is now based overseas, and to be introduced to his girlfriend whom he brought on his return visit to family in New Zealand.

We were asked to do some sessions of family counselling with a local family in difficulties over joint land. This is a family with whom we enjoy a lot of interchange, all of us loving the land and nature and our spiritual pursuits.

We attended the annual street party. Sadly two of the members have died since our last get-together. It was a time for mellow conversations and a catch-up over a pot-luck dinner. The bonds of friendship have strengthened over the many years despite seeing each other only rarely in between these parties. We have since had helpful interchanges with our immediate neighbour who pulled our Landcruiser out of a ditch and offered steel posts from his dismantled chook pen. There is more frequent interchange with our farmer neighbour whom Orest helps out with his sheep from time to time and whose honey we are currently enjoying.

We attended a weekend mindfulness retreat organised by, and reuniting us with, two of our Chinese Zen Buddhist friends, now stationed in Singapore, with whom we shared a year of weekly spiritual exploration in Christchurch in 2022.

There seem to be less rabbits around lately but we were surprised to find the shed skins of several small lizards in our Temple where they hide under the stack of cushions for their moulting process. This indicates a growing population. Orest saw a lizard, about eight inches in length, basking on a rock in the sun when he was mowing. We have recently seen four hedgehogs around the buildings. I would love to hear frogs and moreporks again and to see paradise ducks on our lawn, as we did in the early years here. Yesterday a family of magpies warbled in the gum tree in the early morning, catching the first rays of sun across the mountain rim. Young fantails accompany us along the path to our Temple meditations.

The nourishing of the soil with seaweed, horse manure, ash and compost has paid dividends in a bumper crop of prospering vegetables. Two pear trees are bearing well with handsome red pears on one tree, to be harvested in late March.

Celebration of the Full Moons continued with a few participants, as a time to understand the connection between the heavens and our human energy systems (the chakras) via the incremental influence upon our planet of the qualities of the seven rays, the zodiacal constellations and planets of our solar system. At these times the Temple and our chakra systems, as well as our group meditative focussed intent and creative visualisation become receivers and transmitters for the incoming energies, in an act of service to humanity. This is important as a lead-up to the Wesak Full Moon in May at which, this year, the centennial Conclave of the Masters of the Trans-Himalayan Wisdom will consider the needs of Earth's humanity for the rest of the century and plan accordingly, for the unfolding of the Divine Plan for our planet.

Sending best wishes on behalf of Orest, Peter and myself.

May you readers in the Northern Hemisphere enjoy the increasing spring weather and may we in the south move through some golden days in autumn as we increasingly face the encroaching chill of winter here in the mountains.
